

Red española de Filosofía

THE PHILOSOPHICAL LABORATORY ABOUT THE PANDEMIC AND THE ANTHROPOCENE OPENS ITS DOORS

The great ecosocial experiment caused by the planetary spread of the SARS-CoV-2 virus in the first months of 2020 is an unusual historical event, which tests our political, economic, social and cultural conceptions, altering practically all spheres and scales of the human life. The singularity of the moment, which adds to the great ecosocial mutations of the Anthropocene, such as climate change, the sixth extinction of species and the depletion of energy resources such as fossil fuels, undoubtedly calls for a measured philosophical reflection that allows us to rethink concepts and inherited certainties.

For this reason, the Red española de Filosofía (REF) [Spanish Philosophy Network] has launched the Philosophical Laboratory about the Pandemic and the Anthropocene, a space to debate on the first global pandemic in history and on the necessary transition to another way of inhabiting the Earth. We want the laboratory to serve as a platform to publicize the work and initiatives developed in the Ibero-American philosophical world on these issues. We invite all interested people to visit our web space, where they will find a digital repository of written and audiovisual philosophical reflections on the Pandemic and the Anthropocene, outstanding news, philosophical activities related to these issues. And they will also have the chance of participating in our discussion forum, by sending us articles, images or audiovisual recordings.

Web: <https://redfilosofia.es/laboratorio>

Email Contact: laboratorio@redfilosofia.es

Contact Team:

Antonio Campillo Meseguer. E-mail: campillo@um.es Tlf: +34 665 57 29 84

Salvador Cayuela Sánchez. E-mail: salvador.cayuela@uclm.es Tlf: +34 626 51 93 33